She now calls Virginia's Shenandoah Valley home. She earned both her Master of Divinity and doctoral degrees from Campbell University Divinity School. Throughout her ministry, Laura has been actively involved in missions at the congregational, regional, and state levels, serving in a variety of volunteer and leadership roles. In her current role, Laura focuses on advancing CBFVA's mission through its three pillars of advocacy, education, and partnership. She especially enjoys connecting with CBFVA congregations and supporting clergy and laity as they discern and participate in God's work in their communities and beyond.
